Top 10 Things Business & Industry Wants Education to Remember About Work-Based Learning

10

Don't try to convince us that the student will be a value-added element to the business

9

Don't forget that we exist to make money

8

We don't want to babysit

7

Recognize that a balance must exist between business necessity and student learning

6

Decide what you want from us

5

Work more “up front” with the student to identify the type of experience needed. The area of “manufacturing” is too broad.

4

Spread the wealth among firms.
Don't just use one or two willing locations over and over

3

Do a better job of convincing us why we need to do this

2

Make sure your school's industry contact person doesn't pass the buck

And the Number One Thing to Remember . . .

Make sure your students
show up with a receptive,
appropriate attitude;
arrogance, ignorance, and apathy just won't cut it.
